P.P. Pasolini as a political thinker/ П.П. Пазолини как политический мыслитель

The topic of the mutual influence of politics and the art of cinema is one of the most pressing topics in modern social sciences. If the politicization of cinema is highlighted by a multitude of psychological, sociological and political science studies, then the political views of filmmakers, as a rule, remain without due attention. In this sense, the figure of Pier Paolo Pasolini, an independent Italian communist filmmaker, who expressed his disagreement with the capitalist social system and postmodern morality, is of particular scientific interest. This work presents the political biography of P.P. Pasolini and an analysis of his ideological and political views.

Portrayals of Harbin Russians in Republican Era Chinese Literature/ Образы русских людей, проживавших в Харбине, в литературе времен Китайской республики

The first half of the twentieth century was a time of unprecedented interaction between Chinese and Russians. There were, at times, many thousands of Russians residing in the city of Harbin, in Northern China. Despite this significant Russian presence, however, references to Russia and Russians in Chinese language literature produced in Harbin at the time are cursory. This talk shall analyse the forms that these references take in the short stories of Chinese author Xiao Hong whilst she was in Harbin.

Developing emotional intelligence at schools and universities in the UK, the USA and Russia/ Развитие эмоционального интеллекта в школах и университетах Великобритании, США и России

The work focuses on the concept of emotional intelligence (EI) in the area of education. The study analyses the opportunities students and pupils in the UK and the USA have to develop their EI and the ways developing emotional literacy is integrated into the school curriculum. The results are compared with the current situation in the Russian educational system.

Strategic and conceptual approaches to the formation of the unipolar world order in G. Kissinger's and Z. Brzezinski's writings: a comparative analysis/ Сравнительный анализ стратегических и концептуальных подходов к формированию однополярного миропорядка в трудах Г. Киссенджера и З. Бжезинского

Zbigniew Brzezinski and Henry Kissinger, being the main ideologists of US foreign policy during the collapse of the Soviet Union, held different positions on the implementation of American domination in the world. Nevertheless, the works of these political scientists have proved to be prophetic and still cause intense debate within political community. The paper considers the extent to which the worldviews of the diplomats have affected the modern system of international relations, identifies the principles of their strategies, which are still relevant today, and dwells on the reasons that can prevent America from remaining the only superpower in the world arena.

Contemporary panpsychism and religion: Russell vs. Eddington/ Современный панпсихизм и религия: Рассел против Эддингтона

Despite the stated commitment to naturalism and general progressiveness, contemporary panpsychists from the analytical tradition nevertheless frequently go back to the old spiritual ideas. The beginning of this inconsistency can be found in the history of philosophy, namely in the disagreement between Bertrand Russell and Arthur Eddington, who are considered as the instigators of so-called Russellian monism, a central conception of contemporary panpsychism. Starting from this point, we can distinguish two branches of contemporary panpsychism, one striving to religion, the other to the elimination of any mystical and similar features from this revived theory. Such separation appears to be meaningful, given that proponents of each in fact have different goals to reach.

The contest Leaders of Russia. Politics in the context of future Russian-American relations/ Конкурс «Лидеры России. Политика» в контексте будущего российско-американских отношений

The participants of the contest (20-23 September this year) discussed a wide range of problems relating to Russia's foreign policy in general and to relations with the United States in particular. As events develop, it is becoming increasingly difficult to maintain positive relations with the USA and there are a few reasons for it, not the least is the decision of the USA to withdraw from the Open Skies Treaty and START-3 agreement that has promoted international security for the last 30 years. Young people are particularly interested in improving our relations. They discussed new approaches that could yield new results and solve persistent problems. We have many problems that could be resolved by joint efforts: global warming, international terrorism, proliferation of nuclear weapons etc.

Radical democracy and democratic education/ Радикальная демократия и демократическое образование

In my presentation I focus on two figures who are primarily associated with the concept of radical democracy — Belgian philosopher Chantal Mouffe and French philosopher Jacques Rancière. The works of both of these authors have gained much attention in the philosophy of education recently. First, I elaborate on their ideas about democracy and the notion of political. In doing this, I reveal similarities between their approaches, as well as the areas of disagreement. Finally, I outline some of the possible applications of these ideas to education, particularly, to the practice of democratic education.

A reflection of feminist ideology in children's cartoons as a demand of time/ Отражение феминистской идеологии в детских мультфильмах как требование времени

The main emphasis of this work is put on the cartoons of the Disney studio: in these movies the changes are clearly visible, indicating the demand for feminist ideas in cinematography. Cartoons are a reflection of the demands of time, therefore, we also look at the changes in The Academy of Motion Pictures Arts and Sciences (OSCAR) requirements for their prestigious award in the art of motion picture. We consider the concepts and ideas introduced in the cartoons nominated for the Golden Globe Award by "The Hollywood Foreign Press Association" ("HFPA"), and the ones which became laureates of this award. An analysis is also conducted on the material of the works of the DreamWorks studio and Russian cartoons.

COVID-19 pandemic has significantly changed our daily lives, with many people facing financial difficulties and job losses. It has particularly affected people's feelings and fears. We can postulate extraordinary psychological consequences. The chosen subject is topical and important because it is the first such global and ubiquitous event that covers everyone throughout the world in the 21st century. The aim of the present report is to demonstrate how social isolation has changed mass consciousness.

The 'non-war' for independence: an analysis of Mahatma Gandhi's role in the liberation of the Indian people/ "Не-война" за независимость: анализ роли Махатмы Ганди в освобождении индийского народа

The colonial policy of the British Empire, according to some experts, was a heavy burden that hampered India's development. The attempts of gaining independence by force failed, thus making the people of India search for a new way. The solution was found by Mahatma Gandhi through his idea of fight without violence, which created a new type of revolution that liberated India. The independence was achieved, but the impact made by Mahatma Gandhi is still disputed. The purpose of this report is to define the role of Mahatma Gandhi and his doctrine in the liberation of the Indian people.

A study of humanitarian aspects of Canadian foreign policy: is humanism in Canada a mirage or a landmark?/ Исследование гуманитарных аспектов канадской внешней политики: гуманизм в Канаде - мираж или ориентир?

The authors analyze the possibilities and limitations of the organic merger of humanistic principles and imperatives of national interests in the practice of international relations, using Canada as an example. This problem becomes more important in the critical period of transition from the Cold War to a post-bipolar globalizing world. The choice of Canada as an object for studying the humanitarian aspects of foreign policy is certainly not accidental. In the bipolar world, this country has deservedly gained a reputation as a peacemaker, mediator, human rights activist, and adherent of multilateral diplomacy. In a certain sense, its efforts aimed at developing international instruments for maintaining peace can be seen as an attempt to purposefully affirm the priorities for maintaining peace in the face of a military-political and ideological confrontation between East and West. But are there any selfish goals behind this virtue? This is the main research question of the study.

The role of left-wing parties in modern UK politics/ Роль партий левого толка в современной политике Великобритании

The leftist ideology has been on a steady rise in popularity in the UK, mainly due to dissatisfaction with modern conservative agenda, especially in the light of such controversial political events as Brexit and the ensuing uncertainty about security of the state. In spite of that, the Labour Party, widely regarded as the main center-left party in the UK, lost the 2019 general election leading Jeremy Corbyn, the party's longtime leader, to announce his decision to step down, triggering a 2020 leadership election. Many blamed the Labour Party for being stuck in the past, and that raised a question of whether leftist parties need to reevaluate their role and their goals in modern politics in order to achieve success. The purpose of the report is to examine the causes of leftist parties' consistent loss in the struggle for power, the impact they have had on the country's agenda and the future they are facing.

Since the start of the Black Lives Matter protest, there has been much evidence of violence on the streets of US cities. This consequently raised the question of revising the state's gun policy, since certain groups, under the pretext of public protest against police violence, tried to achieve their own goals, thus fueling American public concern about the accessibility of weapons. The purpose of this paper is to analyze the crisis of the American gun culture from historical and political viewpoints.

Nagorno-Karabakh: searching for a solution/ Нагорный Карабах: в поисках решения проблемы

The Armenian-Azerbaijani conflict has become one of the most intractable, because both sides do not agree to make any concessions. At the stage of the collapse of the USSR, this conflict was accompanied by an acute political and then full-scale military confrontation between Armenia and Azerbaijan, which ended on May 16-17, 1994 with signing of a ceasefire and non-resumption of hostilities agreement with the mediation of Russia. However, controversial issues such as the security zone around the NKR were not resolved by September 27, 2020 leading to a large-scale war, which has already claimed the lives of several thousand soldiers and hundreds of civilians. The report is set to investigate possible solutions for peaceful reconciliation of the conflict.

Migration crisis in Europe: problems and ways of its settlement / Миграционный кризис в Европе: проблемы и способы его урегулирования

Over the past 5 years, European countries have experienced migration difficulties associated with leaving refugees from poor African countries and the warring countries of the Middle East to West countries for a better life. However, many countries have difficulties because of migrant integration into European society. The contradiction consists not only in the difference of civilizations (by religious, ethnic, etc.) but also in a different attitude to the migration policy: Eastern European countries (Poland, Hungary, Czech Republic) advocate stopping the flow of migrants, making harsh statements ("Stop Migrants!"), and other countries (Germany, Sweden, France) are positive about the uncontrolled migration to their countries. In this issue an attempt is made to analyze this problem systematically and suggesting ways to solve the migration crisis in Europe

The reasons for Conservatives' victory at the Parliamentary elections in 2019/ Причины победы консерваторов на парламентских выборах 2019 года

General election in Parliament in 2019 became a great political event of outgoing decade. Due to voting results Boris Johnson had a possibility to get Brexit done. Brexit was the main reason of conservatives' victory, bringing millions of votes to them. Political confrontation of Conservatives and Liberals began in the end of the 17th century. Conservatives and liberals became two major political parties of the United Kingdom. Conservatives and Liberals changed each other in political Olympus of the United Kingdom in the 18th and 19th centuries. But in 1900 the Labour Party was founded. People who voted for Liberals became supporters of the Labour Party. Therefore, the Labour Party became the main opposition to the Conservative Party.

Implementing the idea of shaping civil identity in the USSR: the making of the term 'Soviet people' and its meaning/ Воплощение идеи формирования гражданской идентичности в СССР: формирование термина «советский народ» и его значение

One of the most pressing problems facing Russian political science is the process of shaping the Russian identity. However, what is the basis for it? The answer to this question lies in the study of previous periods in Russian history, and in particular of the time of the Soviet Union. In our research, we trace the genesis of civil identity making in the Soviet Union and the emergence of the Soviet people concept. We also define the constituent elements that can form the basis for the Russian identity.

Canada: soft power as a foreign policy strategy of the middle rank state/ Канада: мягкая сила, как внешнеполитическая концепция «средней державы»

Canada is a great example of modernity, showing how a middle rank state (a country has a small population and a small army) can use the concept of “soft power” for achieving an important position in the global political system. Canada capably exports its values into the world that promotes the consolidation of the Canadian image in the eyes’ of other nations. The authors provide an insight of how the use the “soft power” has strengthened the authority of Canada as a “powerful player” in the international arena.

Nuclear disasters as a challenge for humanity in the 21st century: an analysis of the social and humanitarian consequences of accidents at nuclear power plants / Атомные катастрофы как вызов для человечества в XXI веке: анализ социально-гуманитарных последствий аварий на атомных электростанциях.

The development of science and technology has led mankind to the discovery of nuclear energy. It has proven to be a very efficient and cheap way to generate large amounts of electricity. But progress always has its drawbacks. If an accident occurs at a nuclear power plant, then this has both tactical and strategic consequences for the entire society. In addition to the fact that the territory in the zone of a man-made disaster is no longer suitable for life, a large number of people lose their homes, jobs, and start suffering from terrible diseases. As part of the research, I plan to study the consequences of nuclear disasters on society and ways to solve emerging problems.

Building an Italian cultural code through culinary tradition: a historical-political analysis/ Формирование культурного кода итальянцев через кулинарную традицию: историко-политологический анализ

National cuisine is a part of culture like language, literature and music. Cuisine is also a reflection of several values and behavior principles that appeared in Italian society long ago. The purpose of my study is to analyze the evolution of Italian society through cuisine traditions and food habits. The work presents an interesting picture of the interplay of economic, political, technological and food factors. My work is based on the concept of A. Capatti and M. Montanari, Italian scientists involved in cultural research. Various other works on Italian history are also analyzed. Thus, a comparative analysis of the medieval and modern Italian traditions is likely to help us gain an understanding of the Italian national cultural and social code.

Complex identity research in political science: methodological basics and key features/ Комплексное исследование идентичности в политической науке: особенности и методологические основы

The report gives a short outline of research in political identity as a complex system of beliefs and affiliations. These phenomena of personality are possessed by every individual and related not only to the political realm, but also ethnic, spiritual, economic and mixed ones as well. The authors suppose that a person possessing well-developed identities in every of the four realms is vested with a better readiness to take part in a democratic system rather than a person with only one. This supposition relies on the stipulation that a person clearly understanding his/her statuses and deliberately handling them has a better perception of the political process and social functioning as well, which means a stronger ability to defend personal interests. A complex and multirealm research on identity may also contribute to the clarification of identity issues, especially in the case of Russia. The Russian Federation steadily undertakes measures to construct a civic national identity, but plurality of issues and some other problems remain the obstacle. The authors give a view over the issue of the russkiy identity and present a basic set of research methods.

International interference as a factor of separatism escalation in the Third World countries: the cases of Angola and Papua-New Guinea/ Внешнее вмешательство как фактор эскалации сепаратизма в странах Третьего мира (примеры Анголы и Папуа-Новой Гвинеи)

Nowadays we can see a big splash in regional conflicts. An example of this splash is the Karabakh conflict. If we try to analyze and predict possible outcomes of this regional war, we should pay our attention to the history of such conflicts. Many of them took place as consequences of the demolition of the colonial system. And there are two demonstrative cases of such regional wars which came to opposite endings. The first is Cabinda independence war which began in Angola in 1970s, the second example is a movement for the independency of Bougainville which broke out in Papua-New Guinea in late 1980s. These two regions are rich in mineral resources – oil and copper. Both conflicts were accompanied with a huge external interference of regional players, that is why the purpose of this study is to analyze the quality and degree of this interference. Firstly, we measure the influence of powerful regional states. Secondly, we evaluate the intrusion of transnational organizations.

The issue of feminism in Jane Austen's Emma: a socio-political analysis/ Социо-политический анализ феминизма в романе Джейн Остин «Эмма»

The novel Emma can rightly be considered as a masterpiece of the best world literature. Jane Austen artfully displays well-rounded and complex characters, developing them throughout the story. For a person of the 21st century, Emma is perceived more as a fascinating novel, and the feminist aspect is almost unnoticeable. However, if we recall the socio-political context of the era when women were significantly restricted in their rights and were just beginning to advocate for their expansion, Emma Woodhouse really appears as an attempt by J. Austen to show the significant role of women. My research is aimed to highlight some feminist aspects of the novel Emma.

Political correctness in the United States: a social perspective/ Политкорректность в Соединённых Штатах: социальный аспект

The modern era of American culture is characterized by acceptance of globalization, liberalism and strict political correctness. Many minorities that were discriminated in the past are now protected by the law. However, the emergence of laws that protect only a certain segment of population provokes their unfair usage for personal benefits. Some representatives of social minorities and those who pretend to be them use their position of “potentially oppressed society members” as a tool of influence and pressure. This phenomenon needs to be analyzed in order to understand the current structure of public relations in the United States of America.

The concept of state sovereignty in the modern world: an analysis of opportunities and threats/ Понятие государственного суверенитета в современном мире: анализ возможностей и угроз

The report is devoted to a thorough analysis of the concept of state sovereignty in the modern world. Its significant characteristics were identified and also analyzed during the study. Maintaining state sovereignty is considered to be linked to ensuring human security. Thus, a threat to sovereignty endangers individuals, society and state as such. Consequently, the phenomenon of humanitarian interventions, which are contradictory in their nature, is directly related to the problem under consideration. Humanitarian intervention is carried out to help a state experiencing civil war or social unrest, but it certainly involves coercion that violates the norms of international law and the Charter of the United Nations. The report provides some brightest examples from modern world history that confirm this hypothesis.

Irish nationalism in contemporary Northern Ireland through the lens of British politics/ Ирландский национализм в современной Северной Ирландии через призму британской политики

Since Ireland's independence, the issue of nationalism has become a serious factor in British politics. Irish nationalism reached its peak in the 1970s during The Troubles, but it continues exerting some influence even today. The aim of this report is to see how Irish nationalism experienced such a rise in the 1970s and analyze its modern state and impact on the politics of both the Irish Republic and the United Kingdom.

African sustainable development: a socio-political analysis/ Устойчивое развитие Африки: социо-политический анализ

Confucius once said that if you want to feed a man once, give him a fish but if you want to feed him for life, teach him to fish. How can this idea be put into practice? To understand the picture more clearly, we should go from the general to more specific ideas. For example, around $60 billion worth of annual humanitarian aid is delivered to African countries. Currently, this money serves rather to enhance producers, not consumers, to enrich officials on the way of its distribution, and to pacify benefactors themselves. Why won't $60 billion bring about dramatic changes? Hungry people are still starving, the poor are still sick, the homeless are still sleeping outdoors. The key point is that world community has been giving a fish to hungry people instead of giving them fishing rods and teaching them how to catch it. The report offers some ideas how to improve this situation.

The role of developed countries in economic and social development of African states/ Роль развитых стран в социальном и экономическом развитии африканских государств

Although many attempts have been made to do away with poverty and hunger in African countries, they have not lived up to world community's expectations. Apparently, there are many reasons for it, not the least of which being the fact that so far there has not been general consensus on how to cope with numerous problems. To make things worse, constant fighting, local wars and unrest in many, if not all, African countries prevent many programs from being implemented. To what extent should the economic and political interests of developed countries coincide with those of African countries to secure their sustainable development? The report discusses new trends which are believed to promote further economic and social progress.

The latest presidential elections in Belarus: a political analysis/ Последние президентские выборы в республике Беларусь: политический анализ

The Belarusian presidential elections can be considered as a vivid example of how people's positive intentions to improve the political and social situation in the country could have been interpreted as a deliberate attempt to mislead people and impose Western standards and values on them. The report gives convincing examples how Western countries tried to interfere into the internal affairs of a sovereign state by conducting reprehensible campaigns and providing unfounded arguments. An attempt is made to give an objective analysis of these turbulent events.

Political culture in contemporary Russia: a political and social analysis/ Политическая культура в современной России: социально-политический анализ

Since the collapse of the Soviet Union, there has been intense debate over developing a new political culture. Opinions have been divided as to whether one should retain old political traditions or refuse the political heritage of the past, which was closely connected with a one-party system, administrative way of developing the national economy and centralized system of the decision-making process. Experience has shown that it takes much time and efforts to introduce new methods and ways into the political life of a country. The report stresses the importance of raising political self-awareness of Russian people.

China's re-education camps as a most acute issue in contemporary society/ Синцзянские лагеря перевоспитания в Китае как острейшая проблема современного общества

Since the beginning of the 2000s, the political situation in China's Uighur district has increasingly become more and more turbulent. Millions of people were forcibly imprisoned in the so-called re-education camps on a charge of extremism. Some experts believe that religious and political cleansing are the true intentions of Chinese politicians and compare this situation to political persecution and repressions. Chinese authorities deny all allegations to preserve trade and political relationships with other states. The aim of the report is to analyze the information provided by Chinese government as well as by international organizations and news agencies.

Information technologies in the modern world: a socio-psychological analysis of their application/ Социально-психологический анализ использования информационных технологий в современном мире

The development of information technologies seems to have powerful psychological and social effects which are represented in everyday utterances. However, there are also much more serious consequences concerning, for example, human self-determination. Due to breakthrough discoveries and the development of information technologies, people gradually lose their privacy and become too accessible. It leads to the violation of psychological boundaries and human capabilities. The blurring of these boundaries leads to the fact that people tend to experience stress, anxiety, nervousness and irritation more often, for instance, even in the situation when they cannot answer a call. Thus, a person is tethered to their mobile devices, neglecting other matters and spending too much time on smartphones and other gadgets. It might lead to social media reliance and mental illnesses, to name a few.

An analysis of Hollywood actors' activities aimed at environmental protection/ Анализ деятельности актеров Голливуда по защите окружающей среды

Currently, the digitalization process is in full swing. Technological progress is unstoppable, it penetrates into all areas of life, changes the ways of communication and organization of work, forms of education and leisure. This trend opens up great opportunities for both a large number of citizens and government bodies in the field of governance. This topic is particularly relevant at this time, since the COVID-19 pandemic is forcing a lockdown, and most countries and municipalities are implementing digital government strategies, many of which involve innovative initiatives. But not all countries successfully cope with this task. Now we can say with confidence that many European countries are successfully developing and implementing new technologies in the field of management. Thus, the analysis of the experience of European countries in the field of digitalization is extremely important, since this process determines the trends in the development of society.

The phenomenon of English literary art as an essential prerequisite for the formation of Russian classical literature: a political and textual analysis/ Феномен английского литературного искусства как фундаментальная предпосылка формирования русской классической литературы: политико-текстологический анализ

Russian school education emphasizes the uniqueness of Russian literature and Russian thought. However, modern humanities research, namely in linguistics and socio-political textual studies, makes it possible to assume that Russian classical literature is closely related to English literature and has borrowed some of its features. The Golden age of Russian literature had a number of reasons and prerequisites. Russian literature developed not only by improving the ways of displaying social and spiritual reality, or, as the latter is popularly called, the 'Russian soul', but also by incorporating many European cultural trends. English romanticism had a special influence which determined the form and genre diversity of Russian literature of the 18th - early 19th centuries. Russian literature, which was undergoing its development at the turn of the century, was influenced by the English genre and style. The purpose of this report is to analyze the development of English and Russian literature in the 16th-19th centuries, to identify the main intersection points between them and to reveal some aspects of the English influence on Russian literature by means of political and textual analysis.

At present, the People's Republic of China occupies one of the leading positions in the world's economy. However, the PRC has presumably had to pay a high price for such a rapid growth in industry, sacrificing its environmental well-being. Naturally, as opposed to the economy and public welfare, the ecological situation in China seems to be deteriorating year by year and can possibly inflict significant harm on the biosphere of the entire planet. This problem is undoubtedly within the scope of humanitarian issues of modern society. Therefore, the purpose of this report is to draw attention to the People's Republic of China's environmental problems and analyze their impact on the world community.

An analysis of Russian-Australian relations: socio-cultural aspects/ Анализ взаимоотношений России и Австралии: социокультурный аспект

Russia and Australia have a long-lasting history of relations. We still remember the support of Australia during the years of the war against fascism. Today Russia and Australia interact at the international level, primarily in the Asia-Pacific region. Moscow is interested in strengthening the dialogue with Canberra in order to ensure stability and steady growth. The research focuses on the culture, history, linguistic features of Australia, as well as Russian-Australian relations and the prospects for their development. This topic is relevant, since Russian-Australian relations are currently experiencing difficult times. In order to participate in cross-cultural dialogue, it is crucial to study sociocultural and linguistic characteristics. The aim of the research is to form a holistic view of Australia based on the most typical features of the country. The significance of the work lies in the fact that the provided information and examples help to expand ideas about the socio-cultural characteristics of Australia, which is essential for establishing an intercultural dialogue.

The lobbying institution in Russia: its legal regulation and development prospects/ Институт лоббизма в России: правовое регулирование и перспективы развития

The study of lobbying has quite a long history in Russia, yet today this institution has no clear legislative basis in this country. Despite this, it seems to be actively used to achieve certain political goals. In this report, I aim to give a clear definition of the lobbying institution as such, to trace its emergence over the course of Russian history, to outline attempts at its legislative consolidation and to define the prospects for its further development in this country. In order to examine these topics properly, I provide examples of lobbying models in other countries, such as the USA, where it is quite developed and popular. The topic of lobbying is highly relevant nowadays, since lobbying might be a useful instrument for solving many political and social problems, as well as facilitating greater accountability and transparency of public activities of politicians and executives, as well as other influential figures.

Social and political problems of women: a case study of Yemen from 2000 to 2020/ Социально-политические проблемы женщин в Йемене в период с 2000 по 2020 г.г.

The 20th century was marked as a period of fighting for women's rights throughout the world, resulting in women obtaining the fundamental political, social and economic rights. Nevertheless, there are still some countries where women's issues seem to be either ignored or resolved partially and nominally. Yemen is the country where women are reported to have low positions in society having almost no access to most of their economic, social and cultural rights. Moreover, despite being granted equal political and civil rights with men by the Constitutions since 1990, women still face challenges in exercising these rights. The reason for this lies in an addition to Article 41 of the 1994 Constitution. The article might have served as a foundation to a number of Yemen's discriminatory laws.

This encourages governments and international organizations to look for answers to the serious challenges related to the necessity to accommodate refugees and integrate them into new places of residence. Along the way, it is essential to solve the problem of safety of migrants, which became especially evident during the rescue operation those in distress in the Mediterranean Sea. The problem of adolescents' upbringing has always been topical and controversial. Hence many discussions of 'the right way of nurture' are still taking place. In some cases, Plato is the center of such discussions because on the one hand his theory of upbringing is slightly conservative, while on the other hand, it consists of many necessary ideas that can easily be accepted by the contemporary society. A historical perspective on the split in Russian-Ukrainian relations in 2013-2014/ Исторический взгляд на раскол в русско-украинских отношениях 2013 - 2014 годов

The report explains the split in Russian-Ukrainian relations in 2013-2014 from a historical perspective. It demonstrates a new viewpoint on the world-famous political event called Euromaidan. The main purpose of the report is to find out historical reasons for Euromaidan protests and their impact on modern Russian-Ukrainian relations. The author uses comparative methods. The report aims to correlate the history of Russian-Ukrainian relations since the formation of the Old Russian State with political events in the mid-2010-s. It has been found that the split in Russian-Ukrainian relations in 2013-2014 is conditioned by centuries-old contradictions in geopolitics. Summing up the results, it can be concluded that the deterioration between sister nations - Russia and Ukraine - is a predictable event. Despite this fact, this conflict dramatically affected both economic systems and social relations, that divided families into two camps and the author's family is no exception.

Dynamics of migration policy in Germany since the European migrant crisis 2015/ Динамика развития миграционной политики в Германии начиная с Европейского миграционного кризиса 2015 года

Since the well-known European crisis of 2015 that followed the massive migrant flow into the EU countries, Germany, being a European country with the highest rate of immigrants settled, has been taking decisive action in terms of legislative regulation in order to perform controlling measures aimed at increasing the number of immigrants. Thus, the issue of efficient and beneficial migration policy has been constantly under consideration since 2015. Due to the urgency and relevance of the stated problem, German government has been obliged to alter and modify the current migration policy in order to adapt to the present situation. How has the legislation relative to immigrants developed over the period of 5 years, i.e. up until nowadays? Which tendencies in its execution may allow to predict the governmental measures yet to be taken in this regard? These issues are to be thoroughly examined in course of this research.

M. Weber's legitimate power and the modern understanding of legitimacy: a comparative analysis/ Легитимация власти М. Вебера и современное понимание легитимации: сравнительный анализ

In order to understand the contemporary problem of legitimate authority, it is essential to examine its foundations. In this context, it seems relevant to consider Weber's ideas as one of the founders touching upon this problem. Since we are now witnessing dramatic changes in the world, the problem of the legitimacy of power has acquired particular significance nowadays. Many of these changes are directly related to the legitimacy of government. Therefore, the study of the legitimacy of power is one of the most critical issues of our time to ensure a stable and prosperous future for the world community.

The impact of English on international communication: reasons and effects/ Влияние английского языка на международное общение: анализ причин и последствия

The research is aimed to analyze historical, cultural, economic and some other prerequisites for the English language to have become a means of successful communication for people worldwide. The study touches upon the reasons why English has become international. People are used to thinking that this process began only in the 20th century which is not the case. In addition, the study is devoted to the analysis of English as a language of technology, science, education and communication.

British aristocracy in the 21st century: a historical analysis/ Британская аристократия в 21 веке: исторический анализ

The British aristocracy has always played a leading role in the political life of the United Kingdom. The nobility had existed in England even before the Norman invasion in 1066, so this institution has been deeply rooted in the history of the country. Despite this fact, today the British aristocracy is perceived by many people as a relic. The national traditions die hard in any country. And to no other nation does that apply to a greater degree than to the English whose nature seems to have a sort of patent for constancy. The report aims to confirm this idea by analyzing the data from political and public life of contemporary Britain.

The current situation with the Kurdish language in the world: a socio-political analysis/ Современное состояние курдского языка в мире: социо-политический анализ

The report deals with the current situation with Kurdish, the language of one of the biggest nations in the world. The language is still a means of national identity formation for the Kurds who have tried hard to protect their mother tongue from death for the last 100 years. Although Kurdish is still banned in Turkey, it seems to be developing in Iran and is recognized as an official language in the Kurdish regions in Iraq and Syria. The research looks at the problem from different perspectives. Moreover, the analysis is not entirely devoted to one country but to four other states where Kurdish is spoken.

New Zealand's Green Party and its role in protecting local environment/ «Зеленая партия» Новой Зеландии и ее роль в сохранении окружающей среды

It would not be too much of an exaggeration to say that every country encounters ecological problems nowadays. New Zealand is not an exception. With much of its economy being based on agriculture, New Zealand has to cope with the toll farming takes on its natural environment. Both Maori and British settlers were responsible for large tracts of land being deforested or drained of water. Three years ago the Green party of New Zealand joined parliament. Since then it has been focusing on reducing climate emissions, tackling inequality and protecting nature. Therefore, the main aim of this report is to get the audience acquainted with the situation and present the main achievements of this party.

Polarization and cognitive bubbles in contemporary digital society: a case study of Russia/ Поляризация и когнитивные пузыри в современном цифровом обществе (на примере России)

It was May 2019 when Bill Gates and Jarred Diamond in their short clip presenting the Upheaval book announced polarization caused by the social media as a huge humanitarian challenge of near-catastrophic scale. The two visioners described the formation of cognitive bubbles caused by the current state of communication. Confined in these bubbles, groups of people stop entirely to recognize the meanings which were the common sense not so long ago. The recent collision of N. Mikhalkov and G. Gref regarding SPIEF 2012 is also analyzed in this report in terms of cognitive bubbles. It is noticeable that throughout the centuries Russia has been demonstrating the accelerated adoption of foreign ideas and technologies, from church reforms in the XVII century to Mir Card in the XXI century. This phenomenon requires close attention of political scientists to avoid unpredictable disintegration of society.

Admittedly, the beginning of 2020 didn't seem to be a calm period. Except for all political conflicts and virus outbreaks, there is another important and tragic problem - bushfires in Australia. This ecological disaster, caused by rising level of temperature all over the world, has done enormous damage to flora and fauna of the smallest continent on earth. This catastrophe has made governments of many countries take urgent measures and unite against natural powers. However, many endangered species came closer to total extinction. Political urbanization: the present state and future development/ Политическая урбанистика: настоящее и будущее

The maintenance of existing urban life is responsible for approximately 80% of the world's greenhouse gas emissions and producing the most waste worldwide. Environmental priorities tend to conflict with economic ones. Can environmental problems be dealt with within the existing socio-economic system? Rather than seeking to reconcile the principle of ecology with central features of capitalist modernity this approach views capitalist modernity, and its values, structures and institutions, as the root cause of environmental degradation. The advance of ecological principles therefore requires a process of radical social change.

The role of ASEAN in solving security issues in the Mekong subregion/ Роль АСЕАН в решении вопросов безопасности в субрегионе Меконг

The report examines water problems in Southeast Asia, in particular among the ASEAN member states, whose states belong to the Mekong subregion. Water security is becoming increasingly important for regional security in the continental Southeast Asia. However, mismanagement of water resources in the Mekong river basin is a source of tension and conflict between riparian countries. In this regard, the report presents an analysis of ASEAN's position, as well as the role of the organization in addressing this transnational security challenge. Based on the study, the following methods of managing water resources in the Mekong river basin were identified and justified: linking security issues (the relationship between water, food and energy security), establishing communication between stakeholders, and developing institutional interaction within ASEAN.

The report examines human rights violations in the context of the armed conflict in the southeast of Ukraine (in the Donbas region) from 2014 to 2020. In addition, it analyses the role of the UN in the resolution of this armed conflict. The article focuses on basic documents of international law aimed at regulating fundamental human rights and freedoms, such as the UN Charter, the Geneva conventions and additional protocols, the international Covenant on economic, social and cultural rights. Both systematic violations of international law and breaches of the Ukrainian legislation by representatives of the Ukrainian authorities from 2014 to 2020 were identified in the report. The illegal acts of violence were carried out against civilians, citizens of Ukraine and non-combatants during the conduct of hostilities in the Donbass region according to the analysis of the report of the Office of the United Nations high Commissioner for human rights.

Nowadays, Communist parties do not enjoy as much influence as they did before, however, they still take an active part in politics. The report is devoted to the analysis of the main characteristics of modern Communist political parties in Russia and Canada. The author uses a comparative method to distinguish similarities and differences. The analysis is based on the following criteria: institutionalization, structure, party platform, strategy and tactics, the degree of participation in national politics, the base of support, and election statistics. The main emphasis is placed on promoting social problems in both countries.

Urban biopolitics and biodiversity: checks and balances of the city environment/ Городская биополитика и биоразнообразие: система сдержек и противовесов в городской природной среде

From a scientific point of view, modern cities present themselves as combinations of different dimensions: they consist of natural environment, artificial architectural environment, biocenoses of wild living creatures, ecocenoses of domesticated pets, as well as social networks of people and their interactions. The thread that connects all the mentioned components together with an aim of ordering the chaotic flow of life at the urban scale is politics and political decision-making process in particular. The approach to political activity directed at controlling and moderating vital processes in a certain territory is called biopolitics. This approach is of the primary importance as wrong decisions made on vital problems may lead to disastrous consequences. This research studies official laws and analyzes British and American scientific sources in order to identify political instruments that can be used to preserve the existing complex balance in the urban ecosystem.

Microchipping has generated much controversy recently, with questions being raised about both its psychological implication and its practical significance. There are both potential problems and benefits associated with human microchipping. One problem is that a person's privacy could be severely infringed upon. This could happen because a person's movements could be tracked both physically and financially. Personal data about an individual could be sold or hacked into. A third potential problem may arise about who would have an access to the information, and who would store the information.

The problem of war and peace has become so deeply embedded in our everyday life that we have stopped noticing the influence it has had on the psychology of society and individual social groups. A. Tumanyan, a classical Armenian poet, describes a trifle accident that escalated into a senseless war between two villages and later between two areas. He vividly shows the purposelessness and meaninglessness of these events. The significance of the poem is all the more important now that we see a war going on between Armenia and Azerbaijan.

Socrates and the beginnings of moral philosophy: a historical analysis/ Сократ и начала моральной философии: исторический анализ

Many of early Greek philosophers dealt with issues relating to the meaning and nature of the universe trying to understand what lies beyond the physical world of sense experience. The most radical departure from this approach to philosophy came with Socrates' rejection of any possibility to come to know the real world around us. Instead of trying to penetrate into the essence of things Socrates puts forward his famous idea – Know thyself. He develops a moral philosophy which is concerned with such concepts as courage, piety, temperance and, most importantly, with justice and the good. The report analyzes some of these moral concepts.

A person's moral choice and responsibility for it in The Master and Margarita by M. Bulgakov/ Моральный выбор человека и его ответственность за него в романе М. Булгакова «Мастер и Маргарита»

Sooner or later everyone faces the necessity to make a choice. A person is responsible for the choice he has made. This is freedom—to choose and to take responsibility for it. Every choice has its consequences, even the most unimportant one. Moral choices define our lives. What are the consequences of the wrong moral choice? How can we understand what is right and what is wrong? How the choice affects a person, his/her soul? These are the questions Bulgakov deals with in The Master and Margarita, letting his characters make a choice and showing its consequences.

The fearless speech: the concept of parrhesia in ancient Greek philosophy/ «Речь и истина»: понятие парресия в древнегреческой философии

“The expression "fearless speech" is a rough translation of the Greek parrhesia, which designates those who take a risk to tell the truth; the citizen who has the moral qualities required to speak the truth, even if it differs from what the majority of people believe and faces danger for speaking it” – with these words Joseph Pearson describes the cycle of lectures of Michel Foucault, which were devoted to the concept of parrhesia. Literally, parrhesia is translated as "speaking" or simply "speech". But in different sources it takes on completely different meanings and describes different practices. Initially appearing as a political right of the Athenian citizen, in Plato's dialogues parrhesia becomes one of the main features of philosophical speech, and then in Cynics it becomes a central part of the doctrine.

Every year, thousands of people from all over the planet come together to build the Black Rock City — a seasonal community that embodies human collaboration, self-expression, creativity, and art. The name "Burning Man" comes from the symbolic ritual - burning of a large wooden sculpture ("the Man") that usually takes place on Saturday evening of the event. More than 70,000 people went to «Burning Man» in 2018. While «Burning Man» festival does not have a single focus, its movement is loosely defined by 10 principles that are meant to protect its culture and values. Words of estimative probability and their influence on conveying a message: a comparative analysis/ Анализ слов оценочной вероятности и их влияния на передачу сообщения

This report focuses on ‘words of estimative probability’, which might lead to serious misunderstandings in interpersonal communications. Their importance can’t be overestimated since they are engaged in describing predictions. Business forecasts and long-term planning are the areas of their potential application. A possible solution to the problem is to create tables containing the translation of words of estimative probability into numerical values. This allows us to convey information about the probability from one analyst to another more clearly. However, it is not so easy to determine the final values because the same word (for example, ‘possibly’, ‘certainly’, ‘probably’, etc.) is interpreted differently by different subjects. Thus, borders are not clear, and each subject does not mean a specific value (0.53), but a range of approximate values.

Some other research on this topic is also covered in this report.

Sociocultural challenges of translating the concept privacy into Russian/ Культурологические трудности перевода понятия privacy на русский язык

The privacy—contrary to its image as an outdated, anti-progressive, and hence inessential ideal—is an essential precondition for people to be self-determining. There is a hypothesis that competing imperatives like national security, efficiency, and entrepreneurship have been permitted to override privacy because it is perceived as an optional benefit to the inherent self-determining capacity of liberal agents. By contrast, I argue that the self is socially constructed, and that privacy is therefore an essential personal shield against the perverse influence tactics of commercial and government actors. The report touches upon the problem of untranslatability of this concept into Russian due to cultural difficulties.

Society – religion – education: the American model/ Общество – религия – образование: американская модель

The history of education (including higher education) in the USA had Christian origins and was closely connected with religion. For instance, Harvard, the first American university, was founded by Puritan Calvinists in 1636 to prepare clergy for Puritan ministry. Then most of them moved towards secularization. The starting point of this process was the famous phrase of Thomas Jefferson (1802) about “separation of church and state”. A new wave of Catholic and Jewish immigrants changed the situation greatly. “It led to the development of the Catholic school system” (Doctor Lorrain Ozar). So-called “Blaine amendments” (1875) were passed in several states after the Civil War to ban religious school from getting public funding. Although, a great growth in the number of Muslim population in the USA has led to the need for more Islamic schools respectively. The possible decision in this situation is to develop tolerant public schools.

Charles Merriam (1874-1953) was one of the first to develop a behavioral method in political science. The scientist proposed to rid political science of metaphysics and use only rational methods to achieve accurate results. The true merit of Merriam and the Chicago School is the introduction of quantitative research methods into political activities. Quantitative methods introduced by C. Merriam and his followers included social surveys, population censuses, questionnaires and compilation of statistical data. Thanks to these methods, it became possible to test hypotheses about the behavior of an individual in politics.

The phenomenon of androgyny in Medieval philosophy/ Феномен андрогина в философии Средневековья

This report is dedicated to the problem of the development of Plato's idea of the androgyny in Medieval philosophy. The changes in this concept are connected with the synthesis of the myth of Plato and the biblical history of the Fall of man. There was an external reason for the split of androgyny in Plato's myth. In medieval philosophy the process of separating is associated with the falling away of the soul, which illuminates the internal cause. The way of rebuilding unity becomes a measure of a person's responsibility for his Saluti, because the reason for the split is in human, in his Fall, although it also reflects a disposition of Providence. The Platonic understanding of the androgyny is characterized by indivisibility, while medieval philosophy understood it as a dynamic unity in which opposites complement each other gaining a completeness in the wholeness.

Popularizing scientific communication in Russia: current issues/ Проблема популяризации научной коммуникации в России

The scientific communication industry in Russia has shown explosive growth – against the background of Russian science reorganization. More and more stakeholders are interested in emphasizing the special role of research and innovation in economic, social and cultural life of the country. Universities, research institutes, foundations, museums of science, media industry and many other organizations have recently become increasingly involved in the processes of broadcasting and sharing scientific information with public groups. During the period of quarantine and isolation in 2020, scientists have become the real bloggers and opinion leaders. This report aims to assess quantitative and qualitative characteristics of what is happening in Russia nowadays according to the evolution of scientific communication industry.

Pessimism in non-classical continental philosophy/ Пессимизм в неклассической континентальной философии

My fundamental point focuses on the idea that modern continental philosophy is based on pessimism. I am singling out the pessimistic tendency in the philosophizing of the 19th century, which had a direct impact on modern continental philosophy. The pessimistic way of philosophizing was typical for such areas as the philosophy of life and existentialism. These trends stated the collapse of classical philosophy. Instead of the main foundation of classical philosophy - rationalism - they postulated irrationalism. New philosophy was closely related to intuition, revelation, and faith. The new line of thought was characterized by reasoning about fear and horror, the joylessness and the meaninglessness of existence.

The effect of color on human perception in advertising/ Влияние цвета на восприятие в рекламе

This research is devoted to the effect of different colors on human perception and human minds. Today everybody looks at advertising banners, texts, TV ads, brochures, booklets that try to promote some ideas using various types of light. According to the systematic analysis of the material, at first people perceive the general background, not the information on it. The prerequisites for a more detailed study of the problem in the future have been formed. The question arises: in what way PR-managers use this feature of our brains? How different types of color ads influence our memory? This investigation will help to develop methods of psychological influence in advertising.

Child hunger in the world: a socio-political analysis/ Детский голод в мире: социологический анализ

The report deals with one of the most severe problems the humanity faces today as there are 821 million hungry people today. What makes it even worse is the fact that one in seven children does not have enough food to live an active and healthy life. There are both scientific research and practical projects from global organisations which suggest finding new ways to solve it. However, the question remains: what can an ordinary person do? In the report we investigate an application “Share meal” in which each of us can donate 60 roubles for food to a starving child. This app was released in 2015 by the UN. For an average person, 60 roubles is less than a cup of coffee, and for a starving child, food for the whole day. After conducting a small survey of 20 people, I found that 17 of them had never thought about the scale of hunger in the world. Therefore, by talking about this topic, more and more people will learn about the problem and help solve it.

Misophonia in interpersonal relations: the results of an experiment/ Мизофония в межличностных отношениях: результаты эксперимента

The problem at the focus of the research is misophonia. Although this phenomenon does not occur very often, it is not as rare as seems to be. The importance is highlighted by the fact that we all can be influenced by it. My research question is whether misophonia is an ordinary occasion or it should be considered as something falling out from normal. In the present study, I investigate the mechanism of this phenomenon and its frequency in ordinary people. Probably, there are types of people who are more predisposed to it. For these purposes, I interviewed different people of all ages and overviewed scientific research on this topic. Presumably, the phenomenon of misophonia has its own symptoms, reasons and is far more spread than we think, since it can be a normal part of a person’s perception of the world.

Limericks as a special genre of English poetry/ Лимерики как особый жанр английской поэзии

Limerick is a type of humorous verse of five lines with an AABBA rhyme scheme. The origin of the name limerick for this type of poem is debated. The limerick form was popularized by Edward Lear in his «Book of Nonsense» in 1846. The limerick form is so well known that it can be parodied in fairly subtle ways. What is more important in this special genre: the form or the content? It is a combination of both elements that produces a particular humorous effect.

Christian fundamentalism in the USA in the context of desecularization of society: a historical analysis/ Христианский фундаментализм в США в контексте десекуляризации общества: исторический анализ

Religion has traditionally been one of the major components of national identity and sometimes its most prominent feature. The resurgence of religion may be a reaction against what is thought to be the soulless materialism of secular culture. Fundamentalism is described as a type of religious movement which deals with strict following the sacred texts’ ideas. Being a phenomenon of the 20th century, fundamentalism manifests itself in different religious movements. Some scholars claim that the problem of fundamentalism has a connection with the the process of religious revival. The aim of this report is to take a look at American Christian fundamentalism movements with a view of explaining them as an attempt to reconcile materialism with spiritual values.

Value portrait of generation Z primary school student/ Ценностный портрет младшего школьника поколения Z

There are representatives of six generations in Russia; the greatest generation (1900-1923), the silent generation (1923-1943), the baby Boomer generation (1943-1963), generation X ("X") (1963-1984), generation Y ("y") (1984-2000), generation Z "Zed" (с 2000). Each of them has its own characteristics, which are due to the conditions in which socialization took place and the processes of personality formation. This classification was proposed by American researchers, the creators of the generational theory N. Howe and V. Strauss in 1991. This theory is the most accurate and interesting from the point of view of differentiating the value orientations of representatives of different generations. In my report, I describe the results of a sociological study aimed at studying the values of younger students of generation Z.

Export of educational services in the United States/ Экспорт образовательных услуг в США

The study is focused on the issue of export of educational services in the modern world. Currently, the United States is the leader in the number of foreigners studying in the US universities. However, the analysis of recent statistics shows that the number of international students in the United States is declining. The report gives a detailed analysis of the educational services export in the United States. The research reflects modern changes in the system of education export in the United States. Despite the significant economic benefits of education export, the author identifies barriers that impede and hinder its development at the present stage. The author also considers the impact of the Coronavirus pandemic on the higher education system in the USA.

Downshifting in the modern world: a sociological analysis/ Феномен дауншифтинга в современном мире: социологический анализ

Downshifting has many definitions that are considered in our report. Despite the fact that this phenomenon has recently appeared, it has a significant impact on the postmodern society due to which the phenomenon is produced. The main thing is to follow the principles of rejection the values of careerism and putative “success” in favor of personal happiness. It is an entirely personal decision what to change and what to do according to one’s own targets. That is why there are many different ways of downshifting.

Political aspects of social support in developed English-speaking countries: a case study of Great Britain, the USA and Australia/ Политические аспекты социальной поддержки населения в развитых англоговорящих странах на примере США, Великобритании и Австралии

The report analyses political means and ways of overcoming large-scale social problems such as poverty and unemployment in the USA, Great Britain and Australia. A comparison of these three English-speaking countries allows us to learn about the similarities and differences in the level of general welfare, which lead to certain economic consequences and affect the life quality of people. The official statistical elements of the research provide us with information about allowances, subsidies and other kinds of government help for both indigenous people and foreign residents. The research reveals the achievements of political science and its impact on society, determines development prospects and significant issues that may arise in the field of social support in these three countries.

British tabloids as pillars of British national identity/ Британские таблоиды как столпы национальной идентичности британцев

The report is devoted to one of the types of the British press – the tabloids. The two most popular tabloids - The Sun and the Daily Mail - are compared according to several sociological characteristics and the reasons for their immense popularity are under scrutiny. The examples adduced in the report show that, on the one hand, the tabloids in question translate the established national values while, on the other hand, vehemently condemning everything foreign. The exemplary case are the publications about Meghan Markle.

COVID-19 and the response to the pandemic have a significant impact on the nation’s mental health through increased exposure to stressors. More than two-thirds of adults in the UK (69%) report feeling somewhat or very worried about the effect COVID-19 is having on their life. During these difficult times some companies provide great support to their employees. Companies are giving employees access to resources that range from counseling services to financial aid. In these uncertain times, how employers treat their employees will be remembered for years to come. How businesses respond will have a lasting impact on employee behavior including engagement, productivity and loyalty.

Open access to scientific publications as a necessity in the fight against information inequality/ Открытый доступ к научным публикациям как необходимость в борьбе с информационным неравенством

The report is devoted to the issue of limited access to scholarly information. This process intensifies a digital divide – relative inequality between those who have more or less bandwidth and better or worse skills. Groups of poorly supported people are potentially important for the world research. It’s hard to find free and open access to the latest studies and current research online for those who could get benefits. The position of illegal archivists, publishers and scientists concerning open access to a database of stolen papers is under discussion in this report. The research reveals the cases of Shadow Libraries as the solution to this issue and analyzes how the system reacts to the trial of getting the complete collection of publications for worldwide distribution.

This report touches upon the problem of sexism and its manifestation in America. In modern realities, sexism has a gender identity, defining it as “the oppression of women by male owners”. However, sexism is not only prejudice but also the systemic oppression of a whole category of people. In society, the pressure is not only on women. Men also experience mental health problems due to public pressure. According to the studied data, men do not have any psychological and emotional support. We examined some of the social conflicts associated with this topic and reviewed the public reaction.

Over the past few years, the issues related to gender inequality in the labour market have been actively discussed. According to the statistics, women are considerably less likely than men to participate in the labour market. There is a law on the inadmissibility of any discrimination in labour in many countries, including Russia. Despite this, sociologists believe that discrimination in the labour market exists.

Moreover, it is often associated with stereotypes. In our research, we attempt to clarify different views on this issue.

The most popular stereotypes about Great Britain: their features and social consequences/ Наиболее распространённые стереотипы о Великобритании: их особенности и социальные последствия

We are surrounded by a large number of stereotypes. A social stereotype is a schematic standardized image or representation of a social object. This report is devoted to the study of the most popular stereotypes about Great Britain and the British people. The analysis of these stereotypes, their essential characteristics, features of formation and functioning is important for effective social interaction in the modern global world. The study shows that stereotypical views on culture and other aspects of life can distort the idea of the state and cause negative social consequences in international relations. Therefore, much attention is paid to the place and role of social stereotypes in the modern society as a tool for modelling reality.

Sustainable urban transport of the future in post-COVID era: micromobility as transport solution/ Устойчивый городской транспорт будущего в пост-ковидную эпоху: микромобильность как решение проблемы транспорта

The COVID-19 pandemic has changed the world significantly over the past six months. Great changes have occurred in all spheres of society, namely work, education, entertainment and means of transport. Now we can witness a great shift in the tendency of using transport. More and more people prefer to use individual means of mobility, that is a taxi, car sharing and private cars. This can easily be explained by people's fear of the pandemic, but we also should be aware of the fact that this trend to use private transport has its side effect. As the result, we will have huge traffic congestion and air pollution. The possible solution to the problem is to advocate the use of so called micromobility (bicycles, scooters etc.). This report is devoted to the study of micromobility in Moscow – its current state and future prospects as sustainable transport in the post-COVID era.
